

About the Cornish Rex

The playful, affectionate and athletic Cornish Rex is a small to medium-size cat with an average weight of 8lbs. The Cornish Rex has an extraordinary appearance with unusual wavy coat. The Cornish Rex is distinguished from all other breeds by its extremely soft, wavy coat and racy type. The coat of the Cornish Rex is short and crimped. There is no cat that is 100% hypoallergenic but the Cornish Rex is not typical as it does not have cat hair but a downy coat. Shedding is very minimal if at all.

This is a confident cat who loves people and will follow them around, waiting for any opportunity to sit in a lap or give a kiss. The Cornish Rex enjoys being handled, making it easy to take him/her to the veterinarian or train for therapy work.

The Cornish Rex is not an overly talkative cat but will indeed carry on a conversation if he/she feels the need to express their opinion.

The Cornish Rex cat is a five-star cat on all levels of: Adaptability, Energy Level, Shedding, Affectionate, Grooming, Child Friendly, Intelligent, bathroom hygiene and stranger friendly.

Longevity Range: 9–13 yrs. The Cornish Rex maintains his excellent attitude well into old age. He never loses the desire to interact with people and is best suited to a home where he will receive the love and constant companionship he craves.

The active and social Cornish Rex is a perfect choice for families with children and cat-friendly dogs. He will play fetch as well as any retriever, learns tricks easily and loves the attention he receives from children who treat him politely and with respect.

With his crushed velvet coat, racy, slender body, and curly whiskers, the Cornish Rex is a dandy of a cat.
